Digital Photography in the Archives

Acclaimed photographer Kenny Gray is depositing his collection of prints, negatives, digital files, writing and documentation, accumulated over a forty-year career, to the CSU Archives. The first batch, fifty prints that were exhibited last year as Kenny Gray: Selected Photographs, 1995-2015 at the CSU Rankin Arts Photography Center, arrived in September. Future batches will include photographs documenting the south side of Columbus in the 1970s, as well as his internationally-recognized Brownie Hawkeye photographs from the 1980's.

Gray, who currently serves as director of CSU's Rankin Arts Photography Center, has won awards in national and international exhibitions and his work is held in private and public collections across America, including the Lamar Dodd Art Center in LaGrange, Georgia and The Museum of Contemporary Art of Georgia in Atlanta.

Servant Leadership: Theory & Practice Joins the CSU ePress

The open access journal Servant Leadership: Theory & Practice is now being hosted by the CSU ePress. Edited by Dr. Phil Bryant, an associate professor of Management at Columbus State University, the mission of Servant Leadership: Theory & Practice is to advance servant leadership in both academic and management areas. According to Dr. Bryant, his editorial team is using the CSU ePress for publication of the journal for a number of reasons. Dr. Bryant states:

"We liked the idea of an automated author/reviewer/editor interface. We had previously been using a haphazard combination of spreadsheets, emails and dropbox to try to keep abreast of the manuscripts as they came in and made their way through the editorial process. CSU ePress offered one user-friendly portal to keep everything on track and in progress."

Dr. Bryant also praises the statistical reports that are native to the CSU ePress software. He states that the CSU ePress "allows us to get the statistics we need to make decisions and understand the impact we are making. As an example, our CSU ePress dashboard regarding last month's activity tells us that last month our journal experienced 62 full text downloads from 12 distinct institutions across 9 different countries."

As the first journal to be hosted by the CSU ePress, Servant Leadership: Theory & Practice furthers the CSU ePress' mission of holding the academic and intellectual output of Columbus State University. Not only does the CSU ePress highlight student and faculty work, such as the Momentum and the Arden, it also is an open access platform for journals, conference proceedings, and books.

New Executive Director for GALILEO

Earlier this year, long time serving GALILEO director, Merryl Penson, announced her retirement. Ms. Lucy Harrison has been named as her replacement to the position of Assistant Vice Chancellor for Academic Library Services and Executive Director of GALILEO. Harrison previously served as the Interim Executive Director of the Florida Academic Library Services Cooperative and is a proven leader with a commitment to supporting libraries and the communities they serve. She was the primary liaison between her organization and its forty college and university member libraries and has worked to establish formal partnerships and joint projects with such diverse stakeholders as the State Library of Florida, public libraries, independent colleges and universities, distance learning and student services, and K-12 school districts.

Recent executive-level experience includes serving as Chief Operating Officer and the Director of Library Services for the Florida Virtual Campus, an organization with over a hundred staff, a budget of over $20 million, a customer base of over one million, and an e-resources budget of $7 million. She successfully managed the visioning, transition and merger of library staffing and support from four separate legacy organizations (online distance learning, online student registration and advising services, and two library support agencies) into a new service paradigm. A national thought-leader in next generation services, she has overseen areas as diverse as e-resources licensing, research and development, project management, technology infrastructure, and digital services, in addition to traditional library services.

Logging into GALILEO Made Easier

As most of you may know, accessing GALILEO from off campus has been a bit complicated. First, you either need to know the GALILEO password or how to access GALILEO in CougarNet to log into your favorite databases from home. To obtain the GALILEO password, you need to first log into your GIL-Find account. To do so, you need to know your GIL-Find username and password. To access GALILEO through CougarNet is a bit easier. However, if you do not know where in CougarNet to look, you may have difficulties accessing GALILEO resources.

This process gets more complicated when you access resources in GALILEO that Columbus State University subscribes to separately. An example is JSTOR, which is not provided through GALILEO. CSU Libraries subscribes to it separately to ensure we have the highest level of resources available. To access these CSU-only resources, you need to log into a proxy using your CougarNet username and password.

All of this has changed, however. Now to access GALILEO from on and off campus, you need to log into GALILEO only once using your CougarNet username and password. You no longer need the GALILEO password and you also no longer need to log into the proxy to access resources, such as JSTOR. To make this even easier, if you have already logged into your CougarNet e-mail account or into your CougarView account, you do not need to log into GALILEO at all. This works both on and off campus.

The technology behind these improvements is called Central Authentication Service or CAS, for short. In a nutshell, CAS allows for a single sign-on to all GALILEO resources. It makes using GALILEO from home much easier. You just need to sign in once and viola! You are in GALILEO.

Library Spotlight: Departmental News and Highlights

Getting to Know: Tia Tucker

Tia Tucker is the newest member of our Circulation Team, beginning earlier this year in March. We sat down with her this semester and asked her a few questions so you can get to know her better.

Q: What do you like most about working in the Library?

A: I love meeting patrons and learning about them and the reasons they chose CSU.

Q: What do you think is the best kept secret here? Is there one study spot better than the rest? Is there a library service here people don't know about?

A: I think the best kept secret is that the third floor is actually the quiet floor and the BEST place to study. I think most people don't know that the library has more to offer than just being a hangout spot and that the librarians and staff are here to help them.

Q: What are some things you like to do in your free time?

A: In my free time I do the obvious things like homework, spending time with my family and friends, and volunteering at the Columbus Public Library.

Q: Are you an avid reader? What are you reading currently?

A: I love reading. At the moment I'm reading three books: Man's Search for Meaning by Viktor Frankl, The Stranger by Albert Camus and The Knife of Never Letting Go by Patrick Ness.

Q: You're an alumna, right? What was your time like here at CSU? What was your major? Was there a single most memorable moment you had here as a student?

A: I am an alumna. I majored in English Language and Literature with an emphasis in literature and minored in Business. The most memorable moments as a student were becoming President of Sigma Tau Delta, the English Honors Society, and planning my first Banned Book Reading.

Q: Having graduated from CSU, what advice would you give to students here?

A: I would tell students to plan ahead. Having a back up plan saved me many times as a student, and without one I would have truly suffered.

Departmental Changes

Linda Jones, head of technical services, retired this September. She joined CSU in January 2008 as a cataloging and periodicals librarian. Over time she was promoted to department head and achieved the rank of associate professor. She's had a real impact across campus serving on the faculty senate and a host of university committees. She was also active in the Columbus Area Library Association serving in numerous roles, including president, and was also a recipient of their LIBRA award. When reflecting upon her time here she stated: "I enjoyed every minute of my time at CSU and CSU Libraries and appreciate all of the people across campus who I met and interacted with." Linda was a true asset to the Library and campus community as a whole, and she will surely be missed.

Replacing her to lead the now combined departments of technical services and library systems is Jackie Radebaugh. Formerly our electronic resources and systems librarian, Jackie will now also lead library acquisitions, periodicals, and cataloging. Jackie has extensive experience in these areas, and her background in systems will be especially useful as all libraries in the University System of Georgia are migrating to a new resource management platform this year. We are currently searching for a professional cataloger who will take on Linda's role as a cataloger and fulfill her liaison areas of Philosophy, Psychology, and Sociology. We hope to have the position filled in time for the Spring 2017 semester.

Upcoming Library Exhibits

Carson's Columbus: Race in 20th Century Columbus

September 30 — December 16

Carson McCullers was born in and grew up in Columbus, Georgia. This exhibit looks at the society and culture of the city during that time and how it informed and influenced her writing. It will be on display within the Archives Reading Room. This is a special preview of a larger exhibit that will be on display next semester, during the 100th anniversary of her birth in February.

Stumping in Georgia

October 3 — December 16

On display in the Schwob Library Gallery, this exhibit features items from the CSU Archives documenting political campaigns in Georgia. Also featured is a collection of rare political campaign memorabilia collected by Dr. Frederick Gordon, chair of the Political Science Department.

TARANTULAS!

October 31

A special one night only showing of items from the Archives including original movie posters, copies of the script, and production stills. Items will be on display in the Library Forum Area in conjunction with the film screening.
